CONFERENCE GATHERING
THE DOG AND DUCK PUB
ADDRESS: 406 WEST 17TH STREET AUSTIN, TX 78701

The Symposium About Language and Society—Austin (SALSA) is an annual symposium promoting linguistic and sociolinguistic research at The University of Texas at Austin. Originally created through the joint efforts of students from the Linguistic and Anthropology Departments at The University of Texas, SALSA has developed into a truly interdisciplinary conference with contributions from various fields, including communication studies, foreign language education, educational psychology, media studies, speech communication, and numerous language departments. Our annual proceedings appear in special editions of Texas Linguistic Forum.

The Symposium About Language and Society Co-Chairs:

Brett Anderson (University of Texas at Austin, The Department of Linguistics)

Matthew Ingram (University of Texas at Austin, The Department of Communication Studies)

Morgan Siewert (University of Texas at Austin, The Department of Anthropology)

We would like to thank the following departments for sponsoring the 22nd annual Symposium

About Language and Society: The Department of Linguistics, Department of Anthropology, Department of Communication Studies, Department of Asian Studies, Center for Middle Eastern Studies, and Department of French and Italian.

Our Thanks to: Elizabeth Keating (professor in the Department of Anthropology) for aiding with conference logistics, finances and numerous aspects of this process; Benjamin Rapstine (graduate program coordinator in the Department of Linguistics) for his help in coordinating funding allocations and various projects concerning the symposium; Ian Wallace for designing the conference poster; and the various UT students who have generously volunteered their time and energy in order to make this conference possible.
